SEE YA, CUPCAKES; THIS PROUD PASTRY IS THE NEXT SWEET THING

By Erin Sarris | FOR REDEYE

For Kevin Hyde, a holiday without pie is like a holiday without laughter: as dull as it comes. And for his wife, Amelia, the warm flaky pastries are the only appropriate way to cap off a holiday feast.

"There's pumpkin pies and apple pies for Thanksgiving, strawberry pies at the Fourth of July, blueberry pies over Labor Day and chocolate pies for Valentine's Day," said Amelia, 33, an attorney who baked the winning pie for 2009's Bucktown Apple Pie Contest with her husband. "I can't imagine holidays, celebrations or the frequent Sunday afternoon without one."

While many know Chicago as home to the "other" kind of famous pie—deep-dish pizza—dessert devotees say these flaky favorites are as Midwestern as they come.

"Chicago is such a great food town, and with the growth of farmers markets, the freshest Midwest organic fruits are easily accessible in the city," said Kevin, 36, a commercial litigation attorney (and admitted sous chef of the winning apple pie entry).

Local pie lovers aren't the only ones lusting for crust in Chicago. The October issue of Bon Appetit named Ukrainian Village's Hoosier Mama Pie Co. one of the Top 10 Best Places for Pie in the country.

For the Hydes, who live in Logan Square, it's no surprise one of Chicago's local bakeries ranked nationally.

"Nothing says apple pie more than the crisp Midwest autumns we enjoy here in Chicago," Amelia said.

Tradition dictates a proper pie to have just the right combination of seasonal fruit, a crisp flavorful crust and the right combination of old-fashioned spices. But on the heels of recent cupcake and doughnut movements, pies have come to incorporate more savory options from dessert chefs who want to shake things up a bit.

In addition to about 20 traditionally sweet varieties, Hoosier Mama has baked up pie flavors such as pork apple sage and chicken pot pie. And on the menu at newly opened gastropub Owen & Engine in Logan Square, meat pies with chutney and pickles are a signature dish. If it seems like pies are picking up in popularity, it's because they are: In a recent issue of food industry magazine Nation's Restaurant Review, pie took its place at the top of the list for standout 2011 food trends according to hospitality consultant Andrew Freeman. He noted the cupcake craze of 2010 and predicted that shops will be making room for both sweet and savory pies during the next year.

Analysts from United Kingdom-based consumer research firm Mintel, which has an office in Chicago, also noticed a recent spike in pie consumption. Citing a return to inexpensive comfort foods in a post-recessionary world, the firm found the sale of pie in the U.K. increased 5 percent in 2008 and 2009 and estimated it to grow 17 percent in the next five years.

Bucktown Apple Pie Contest contestant Eugene Greenstein said pie's appeal may extend across the pond, but it became a defining national dish right here at home.

"When you think pie, you think about wholesome Midwestern values," said the 32-year-old cardiologist from Bucktown. "Like a pie cooling on the windowsill? That's pure Americana."

With the winter holidays on their way, Chicago bakeries and restaurants are warming up their ovens to make space for the slices of the season. Here are six of our faves.

The death of a baby is heart-breaking, even if that baby happens to be an elephant.

"Feast or Famine," Episode 3 of National Geographic Channel's gorgeous, global "Great Migrations" project, will break your heart.

"The newborn is in real trouble, and this is a place without pity," says narrator Alec Baldwin, talking about a Mali elephant that won't survive the 300-mile migration through the rain-deprived Sahara Desert.

Death, or the threat of it, constantly dogs all the species shown in "Great Migrations," the massive, seven-part series filmed over three years across 420,000 miles on seven continents, according to the channel.

Baldwin says early in the first hour, "Born to Move": "They are born to move. To move—or die."

Flip that loaded statement (the writing gets a bit mawkish) to the positive and you see how migration also means life. The filmmakers show plenty of living with stunning photography that captures a mayfly's birth, a walrus pup's swimming lesson and a Peregrine falcon's dazzling aerial attack on a bald eagle.

"Great Migrations" is Nat Geo's response to such nature specials as "Planet Earth," "The Blue Planet" and "Life." I've not seen all of those specials, so I can't really compare. But I can say that the photography in "Great Migrations" blew me away.

And despite a lack of science in the first four parts, I learned a lot. For example, did you know it takes four generations of butterflies to complete the migration from Mexico across the U.S. to as far as Canada?

The series also offers what could be considered

DVD extras too. The fascinating "Science of Great Migrations" follows scientists tracing the migrations and "Behind the Scenes" reveals the human effort that went into creating this series. "Rhythm of Life" ditches all narration, putting the animals' stories to a beautiful musical score.

Despite the bombastic writing of the core four episodes, there is plenty of drama to love in the storytelling. What follows that baby elephant's death, for instance, is as touching and uplifting as anything I've seen on TV.

James Bond 007: Blood Stone

Available now

With another James Bond flick not expected to hit the silver screen for two years, your best bet for a "007" fix is in the video game realm. Daniel Craig voices the smooth super spy in "Blood Stone," which features a new story in the Bond canon. It's got more exotic locales, over-the-top action sequences, car chases and all the international intrigue you'd expect from the series. The multiplayer doesn't stack up to "Call of Duty," but "Blood Stone" is worth a spin or two in the Aston Martin. RYAN SMITH FOR REDEYE

Man on the Moon 2: The Legend of Mr. Rager

Kid Cudi

Kid Cudi has fallen in love with the night. "Man on the Moon 2" is all dark, even making Mary J. Blige sound bleak. Only on the rockish single "Erase Me," featuring Kanye West, and the driving "Maniac," with St. Vincent, does Kid break out of the synthesized melancholy haze. "The Legend of Mr. Rager" could use a lot more rage. GLEN GAMBOA, NEWSDAY

Beatrice "Beezus" Quimby must deal with an imaginative younger sister. Selena Gomez stars. Joey King is the perfect pick as Ramona Quimby in the new family-friendly film based on Beverly Cleary's books. Someone should hurry up and invent a time-freezing machine so Joey can stay this age for future projects. The screenplay by Laurie Craig and Nick Pustay throws out a host of emotional challenges for Joey, from major family disasters to one of the worst school picture days in history.

Childish pranks, toilet humor and recycled jokes are at a premium in this comedy that reunites "Saturday Night Live" stars Adam Sandler, Chris Rock, David Spade and Rob

Good time to be

PATRICK WILSON

'Morning Glory' star likes life under fame's radar just fine

The Kansas City Star

Patrick Wilson is recognized by maybe 20 percent of moviegoers and 100 percent of movie casting directors.

He says he can live with that.

"As an actor, it's wonderful," says Wilson, who stars in the romantic comedy "Morning Glory" opposite Rachel McAdams, Harrison Ford and Diane Keaton. "I've never yet been typecast. I get to play all sorts of things."

Indeed, a look at Wilson's resume suggests he can do just about anything.

He made his on-screen debut as a gay Mormon in HBO's "Angels in America," then played William Travis in Disney's historic epic "The Alamo."

He sang his way through the role of Raoul in the filmed version of "The Phantom of the Opera," played a serial killer in "Hard Candy," was a stay-at-home suburban dad who has an affair with a neighbor (Kate Winslet) in "Little Children" and was a costumed vigilante with impotence issues in the superhero epic "Watchmen."

"I get great roles and few of the hassles," Wilson said in a recent phone conversation from the New York home he shares with his wife and two children.

He recalled a recent meeting with a real estate agent.

"She says, 'Hey, I know you. I've seen you before.'"

"I say, 'Yeah, well, I'm an actor.'"

"And she says, 'No, that's not it. I think I've seen you at my gym.'"

"I get a lot of that."

Wilson says he didn't get into acting with a dream of becoming a household name. After graduating from Carnegie Mellon University, the Virginia native went to the Big Apple, where he spent almost a decade on stage before making the leap to the screen.

At this point in his career, Wilson is busy but not particularly famous. He thinks that's ideal.

"I'm at the stage now where I don't want people to know too much about me," he said. "With the iconic stars—Paul Newman, Steve McQueen, Robert DeNiro—I knew almost nothing about their personal lives.

Patrick Wilson

"It's like Meryl Streep. I don't really want to know how she does it, and I've worked with her twice. I like the mystery of acting."

Wilson says that in hindsight, he was thankful that he didn't have to cope with overnight stardom.

"If 'The Alamo' or 'Little Children' had been huge commercial successes, it might have been a trap," he said. "I see it happening to friends of mine—a movie hits big and you start getting sent all these scripts from the same genre. I never had to deal with that. So far, there's no Patrick Wilson 'type.'"

Sure, he'd love to star in a big-budget movie.

"But I believe my career has been meant to be

Wilson and Rachel McAdams in 'Morning Glory'

this way. I didn't do a movie until I was 30. I was doing lots of theater and loving it. I enjoy going from something big and blustery to a tiny little role.

"I could do this forever."

'Morning Glory'

PG-13

A welcome little pick-me-up like your pre-work coffee, "Morning Glory" has the contagious energy of someone whose good personality can win over even the biggest grouch. That's mostly thanks to Rachel McAdams, whose incredible charm and ability to find sweetness even in Becky's most manic, desperate moments should remind studios never to hire Katherine Heigl or Jennifer Aniston or Kate Hudson for another romantic comedy, ever. Writer Aline Brosh McKenna ("The Devil Wears Prada") can't resist sporadic, annoying cheesiness or forcing Becky to be a dope when it comes to relationships, as if the genre requires it. The movie's got laughs and spunk, though. Harrison Ford and McAdams bicker with old-fashioned appeal, leaving little for Patrick Wilson or Diane Keaton to do but add more good vibes in the margins. The result is a morning news movie that's much like the morning news: Loose and peppy and inconsistent, which sorta makes it even more likable and comforting.

Nap during this train ride

When he and his buddies finish grumbling their own, youth-targeted version of the “South Park” refrain, “They took our jobs!,” 28-year railroad veteran Frank (Denzel Washington) and one of those arrogant youngsters (Chris Pine) try to stop an unmanned, 39-car train packed with hazardous chemicals from causing damage across Pennsylvania.

The buzz: Obviously Washington and director Tony Scott have a fondness for trains, returning for another transportation-related action flick following last year’s remake of “The Taking of Pelham 123.” Eek, and “Unstoppable” comes from the writer of junk like “Deception” and “Live Free or Die Hard.” Let’s hope the swagger Pine offered in “Star Trek” and the typically strong Rosario Dawson as a train dispatcher can give this thriller, with a central challenge that’s inspired by a true story but sounds like a job for Superman, some bounce.

The verdict: This action movie is likely to please only train fanatics who delight in the use of phrases such as “trip a relay” or “counterthrust.” Scott certainly doesn’t generate any suspense from the competently staged but hollow action, which suffers both from stupidly obvious attempts at tension (Horses on the train track! Kids on a railroad safety field trip on a collision course with the train!) and the fact that watching someone drive a train is boring. Washington’s charisma occasionally compensates, but Pine’s half-asleep and Dawson’s clearly not excited to deliver lines like calling the train “a missile the size of the Chrysler building.” Clichéd, family-related back stories also serve as unintentional self-parody in a film that proves 10 million pounds of runaway train can be massively dull.

Sweaters heat up your look

MCT

Angled bottoms. Chunky fabrics. Interesting prints.

This season's sweaters exude elegance and artistry with anything-goes style. Gone are the days of the solid-color, button-down-the-front cardigan. This season, knits not only keep you warm, they add vibrancy to your wardrobe.

"Owning knitwear makes a lot of sense because it's versatile," says Gregg Andrews, Nordstrom fashion director.

Having sweater options can take you from the work week straight into the weekend. Wear them over a dress, skirt or slacks for work. For more casual affairs, pair with jeans or leggings. Most of these sweaters can be worn by women of different ages and body types, Andrews says.

"Sweaters are definitely practical because they are comfortable and cozy and offer a layering ability," Andrews says. "It may not be snowing, but you still want something comfortable and cozy to wear once the temperature drops. It can be used as a coat or worn under a coat. And some of the sweater choices today are very appealing to look at."

Try a camel, gray or black sweater that hits from mid-thigh or knee length and is chunky but not too bulky. Change the look by adding a different belt or layer it over different outfits. The look is completely different over black trousers and a polished belt and pumps than with jeans, a chunky brown belt and boots.

"Women feel a great sweater is a good investment and a safe choice," Andrews says. "Because it's versatile, and women want that. These sweaters also are dramatic. They are wearable drama."

Fur-trimmed sweaters are another option for transitioning into colder temperatures, says David Hacker, vice-president of trend and color for Kohl's department stores. They are perfect come holiday time.

"This year is all about sweaters, from patterned Fair Isle and feminine pointelle to cashmere and cardigans," Hacker says.

Think Nordic and Fair Isle motifs are the definition of traditional?

Not this year, reports Self magazine. Creative variations and fresh color combos give them new life. Pair them unconventionally too—with patterned pants or a skirt, not the typical solids.

In the November issue of InStyle, fashion director Cindy Weber Cleary provides smart advice on wearing patterned knits.

These sweaters are natural pairings for jeans and cargo pants, Weber Cleary says. Flat boots and rugged leather belts sustain the attitude. Or go for the contrast of a homespun cardigan over a sexy black miniskirt and booties. Either way, limit your palette to colors found in nature, she says. Your hair, nails and makeup should look effortless.

If you do choose a solid cardigan, buy one that's slim fit with a slouchy collar to be on trend, according to Lucky magazine. Touches such as leather sleeves look cool and sexy. Choose a grandpa basic sweater but in a nicely modern cut. Sequins on sleeves or collars add an interesting touch to a solid hue.

Sweater care

Keep your knits looking like new with these tips from Self magazine:

- » Wovens don't require a wash after every wear. (Hooray!) If one is soiled, check the tag to see whether it's machine washable or hand-wash. A good gentle cleanser is Eucalan No Rinse Delicate Wash (eucalan.com). A lemon dishwashing soap will do, says Steve Boorstein, author of The Ultimate Guide to Shopping and Caring for Clothing.
- » Fold knits a different way after each wear to prevent perma-creasing.
- » A sweater shaver is the best way to remove pills. Practice on a place that doesn't show, like under the arm. Glide the shaver lightly and slowly.
- » Before storing your knits for summer, clean them. If you've worn them—even for only a quick try-on—bugs will be attracted to eau de you.

A bang-up brunch

By Lisa Arnett

A polished British-inspired pub on the fringe of Logan Square, Owen & Engine isn't your average pub. So it follows that weekend brunch isn't your average pub brunch. Bud vases line the tables and traditional pub dishes get a Midwestern makeover with meats from local farms. Decidedly unrushed service will make you want to linger over your pot of tea.

Server says: Try the salt beef hash or the ploughman's lunch (both $14), a farmer's picnic lunch-inspired platter of wheat bread, salted beef, smoked ham, aged cheddar, horseradish creme fraiche and piccalilli, a relish of spiced, pickled vegetables.

We say: Right on with the hash, a hearty pile of house-cured salt beef and cubed potatoes. The crowning glory is a duck egg that's soft-boiled, breaded and flash-fried, leaving enough runny yolk inside to drip deliciously onto the plate. Benedict devotees should try Owen & Engine's version with fried eggs and rashers (cured meat cut from pork loin instead of pork belly like bacon) atop fresh-baked crumpets ($13).

Is it lunchtime yet? Besides the make-your-own-sandwich platter that is the ploughman's lunch, there's also a caramelized onion-topped burger ($14) made with beef from Slagel Family Farms in downstate Illinois.

Something sweet: Start with an icing-drizzled sticky bun ($5). Pastry chef Crystal Chiang bakes one batch for each brunch service, and when they're gone, they're gone.

Day drinking: The bloody mary ($8) is doctored up with Boyd & Blair small-batch potato vodka and house-made pickle juice. Bubbly fans will adore the Duchess ($10), prosecco, lemon juice and Fragoli, an Italian liqueur made with wild strawberries.

Buzz factor: Two Metropolis coffee blends (the full-bodied Falstaff Winter and sweeter Ethiopia Sidamo) and a smattering of teas.

Crowd surfing: It's not all Logan Square hipsters here. An all-ages crowd included couples along the bar, and a group of Bears jersey-clad girlfriends more interested in chatting than watching the game playing on TVs above the bar. LISA ARNETT IS THE METROMIX DINING PRODUCER. AARON RODGERS GREEN BAY

Rodgers sustained a mild concussion after a helmet-to-helmet hit from Washington defensive end Jeremy Jarmon in the waning moments of their game Oct. 10. Rodgers didn't miss any time because the concussion was considered "mild," but can any blunt force head injury really be considered mild?

BRETT FAVRE MINNESOTA

Looking at Favre's long list of ailments this season, it's tempting to think that coach Brad Childress soon will be forced to wheel him around the field "Weekend at Bernie's" style. The NFL's iron man also wore a protective boot last week because of two fractures in his left foot. To make matters worse, Favre was listed with a chin injury. Favre's ego? Still remarkably healthy.

'Healthy' is relative term for NFC North quarterbacks

By Ryan Smith FOR REDEYE

What's black and blue and red all over? The quarterbacks of the NFC North, who have endured a season's worth of punishing hits and injuries during the first nine weeks of the season. But which beat-up signal caller from this new version of the "Black and Blue Division" has had it the worst? Here's the breakdown, with a four-bandage rating. RYAN SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

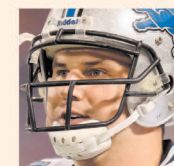

JAY CUTLER BEARS

The Bears offensive line has allowed an atrocious 32 sacks this season, and Cutler often has been the victim. He suffered the worst of it Oct. 3, when the N.Y. Giants sacked him nine times in the game's first 24 minutes. Mercifully, Cutler did not return in the second half, as he'd suffered a concussion. He sat out a game and a half because of the injury.

MATTHEW STAFFORD/ SHAUN HILL DETROIT

Pity the poor Detroit passers. Lions starter Matthew Stafford recently had returned from a separated shoulder injury suffered in Week 1 against the Bears when he re-injured the same throwing shoulder against the N.Y. Jets on Sunday on a 1-yard run. And the Lions couldn't bring in second-stringer Shaun Hill (above) because he's recovering from a broken left forearm suffered last month. Ouch.

What do the Bulls and Blackhawks need to pack for their two-week road trips?

Heat.

Extra protection. They've been letting too many shots go through.

Something good to read in the hotel and the will to get above .500.

At this rate, they should be packing heat because they're both woefully short of effective weapons.

Their game faces. They can leave the clowning around at the UC.

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redeyechicago.com/puzzles. EDITED BY MICHAEL MEPHAM

LOCO FOR LOCOMOTIVES

It's easy to understand the appeal of a good train movie. Train travel can be glamorous a la "North by Northwest," mysterious like "Murder on the Orient Express" or even magical, as in "Harry Potter."

But apparently, no one likes a train movie more than Denzel Washington, who with this weekend's new "Unstoppable" is starring in his second big-budget train movie in as many years. Heck, he even starred in "Training Day."

In "Unstoppable," Denzel plays a train engineer who must figure out how to stop a fast-moving runaway train carrying toxic material before it causes massive destruction to a city. This role, you'll remember, comes after last year's "The Taking of Pelham 123," most memorable for featuring John Travolta as a Mr. Clean-lookalike hijacker.

So if you're interested in watching a work from the albeit limited genre of Denzel Washington train flicks, which should you see? Sounds like it's time for a RedEye faceoff! ARIEL ALEXOVICH FOR REDEYE

"Pelham": ... a 1973 novel by John Godey and 1974 film starring Walter Matthau.

"Unstoppable": ... the true story of the "Crazy Eights" train that ran full speed and unattended for 66 miles in 2001.

Verdict: "Unstoppable." Ooh, how 'bout a promotional tie-in with Crazy Eights, the card game?

LEADING LADY

"Pelham": Ahem, no one.

"Unstoppable": Rosario Dawson (left)

Verdict:

"Unstoppable." Someone as hot as Denzel deserves an equally hot female costar.

DIRECTOR

"Pelham": Tony Scott (right), who also directed Denzel in "Man on Fire."

"Unstoppable": Ha ha, trick question! It's also Tony Scott.

Verdict: Draw. Got yourselves a lil bromance there, gentlemen?

DENZEL'S SEX APPEAL

"Pelham": Glasses, beard, old-man weariness

"Unstoppable": Clean-shaven go-getter

Verdict: "Unstoppable."

We don't like to be reminded that Denzel is aging.

WELL-MEANING SIDEKICK

"Pelham": James Gandolfini (right), who plays the New York mayor

Verdict: "Pelham." A mobster's gonna kick a "Star Trek" guy's butt.

THE WINNER: 'UNSTOPPABLE'

But then again, "Pelham" set a low bar.

MUPPETS GO GAGA?

Hope Kermit likes the paparazzi. It's just a rumor right now, but Lady Gaga may appear in the Muppets' movie due in theaters next year.

According to MTV, which cites industry publication Production Weekly, the singer could be part of a storyline with Miss Piggy (below).

This wouldn't be the first time the singer has gone gaga over the Muppets—she showed up for an interview in Germany earlier this year in an outfit made entirely from plush Kermit the Frog dolls.

Sex, ballet and tequila

No tequila bottles were harmed in the making of "Black Swan's" graphic love scene, Mila Kunis (right) says, according to people.com. Kunis, who shares the scene with Natalie Portman in the upcoming ballet thriller, said, "I don't think we could have done that scene if we were intoxicated." Kunis and Portman are close friends off-screen, but that didn't help. "They're never comfortable, same-sex, opposite-sex, it's never comfortable," Kunis said of filming love scenes.

HOT DATE

When the first release from Michael Jackson's posthumous album is set to drop, ew.com reports. The single, "Hold My Hand," is a collaboration with Akon.

More Kanye drama

Kanye West wants you to know he doesn't hate "Today" host Matt Lauer, but he's also not performing on the show. West took to Twitter earlier this week to voice his displeasure with a recent interview with Lauer, MTV reports, and it aired Thursday with Lauer announcing West would return Nov. 26. "I'm not performing on the 'Today' show for obvious reasons," West tweeted. "... I blatantly said I'm not performing [on the show] on a tweet ... and the next day they still announced a performance."

'DWTS' surprise survey

If Us magazine readers are any indication, ABC might want to reconsider casting a same-sex couple on its hit "Dancing With the Stars" next season. In a poll posted on the magazine's Web site, 61 percent of respondents said they would NOT watch same-sex couples on "DWTS." Rumors of a Portia de Rossi-Ellen DeGeneres pairing have swirled since "Dancing" producers were said to consider following in the footsteps of the Israeli version of "DWTS," which is set to debut its same-sex couple.

Lil' Wayne back to work

Lil' Wayne (above) doesn't waste any time. Just one week after getting out of jail, the rapper is set to release a new song, rollingstone.com reports. "We're trying to put it out, like, tomorrow," Cortez Bryant, Wayne's manager, told Rolling Stone. "... If not tomorrow, definitely next week." Stay tuned.
